Alexandria focuses her practice on defending commercial transportation companies and their insurers.

Alex was a summer associate at Weber Gallagher and worked at the firm during her third year of law school. During her time at Weber Gallagher, Alex researched and prepared memoranda on topics consisting of premises liability, slip and falls, allegedly defective equipment, and personal injury claims. She also assisted on a case involving the defense of medical personnel against general liability matters.

While in law school, Alex served as a judicial law clerk intern to the Honorable Steven C. Tolliver in the Montgomery County Court of Commons Pleas. She also previously served as a legal department intern for West Pharmaceutical Services. At Villanova Law, Alex was a certified legal intern for the Farmworker Legal Aid Clinic and served as a research assistant. She previously interned at an employment law firm.

Alex was a member of the Moot Court Board and served as the director of external competitions for the Board. She was a quarterfinalist in the 59th Annual Theodore L. Reimel Moot Court Competition. Upon graduation, Alex received the Moot Court Board's Commitment to Service Award.

Experience

- Successfully retried a case remanded by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania involving the Mental Health Procedures Act by representing a Psychiatrist performing a Psychiatric Evaluation on a patient with mental health disorders during his admission to a drug detoxification and rehabilitation facility. The lawsuit filed alleges that the "cocktail" of medications prescribed for detoxification created a lethal combination for the plaintiff and that a cardiac condition was missed by the ED staff. Psychiatrist performing a Psychiatric Evaluation, the Mental Health Procedures Act (MPHA) was implicated, increasing the burden of proof for the Psychiatrist to that of actions of willful, wanton, reckless conduct. The Trial Court ruled that the prior Supreme Court Opinion prevented the application of the MPHA in this instance. The burden of proof remained as ordinary negligence as to all defendants. The jury rendered a unanimous defense verdict in approximately 45 minutes. No appeal was filed.

- Secured a defense verdict for two defendant Radiologists in a case where they were alleged to have missed the diagnosis of a thoracic aortic aneurysm on the abdominal CT scans that they interpreted 6 and 18 months before plaintiff's demise. The defense of this case surrounded the fact that a thoracic mid-ascending aortic aneurysm cannot be seen from an abdominal CT scan.
