Katherine defends commercial transportation companies, their insurers, drivers, and brokers in state and federal courts in Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Katherine represents national motor carriers and their drivers in the full spectrum of possible liability claims from the trucking industry. She handles matters involving accident-related claims alleging personal injury, catastrophic loss, property damage, and cargo liability claims. Katherine also handles premises liability and personal injury claims.

With her background in reviewing and analyzing lease and broker agreements and insurance contracts, Katherine assists clients with evaluating their insurance coverage and defense and indemnification obligations.

Katherine has made presentations regarding responding to frivolous litigation, tactics for virtual trials and hearings, and the intersection of criminal and trucking law.

Katherine was a legal intern for the Honorable Thomas P. Rogers, Montgomery County Court of Common Pleas. She also interned for the Honorable Thomas J. Reuter, U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.
