

David Greene Successfully Defends Claim Petition in Case of Alleged Emotional Stress Leading to Heart Attack

Successfully defended a Claim Petition for a heart attack where the employee asserted physical and emotional job responsibilities of being a handler of money for an armored truck company caused or contributed to a disabling heart attack. Both medical experts agreed that the employee was totally disabled, but disagreed as to the cause. David utilized one page from thousands of pages of hospital records to show that the events as described by the employee's co-worker were different from those alleged by the employee.
