

Paul Fires Wins Opiate Case

Won a major victory for a client involving a substantial prescription opiate abuse scheme by an injured worker. The woman in question was filling multiple prescriptions simultaneously from different medical providers and using various pharmacies. The belief is that she was not consuming them. The Judge in question eliminated the employer's responsibility for payment of the drugs, past, present and future, limited substantially the scope of her injuries and ordered a credit for overpayments made to the injured worker.
