

Representative Experience

- Weber Gallagher handles workers' compensation, employment, general liability, risk management and litigation matters for pharmaceutical and medical device companies.
- Weber Gallagher's attorneys have extensive experience in multidistrict litigation proceedings for both name-brand and generic drug companies. These cases involve strict liability, failure to warn and fraud. Our attorneys also represent medical device manufactures in product defect cases.
- Our focus in any defense work is preparing our clients for all they may encounter during litigation, including extensive document collection and production to ensure discovery requirements are met, preparing clients and their employees for depositions and retaining the best expert witnesses. In addition to defending clients in complex litigation and at trial, we also work hard to achieve settlements through alternative dispute resolution.
- Weber Gallagher has defended pharmaceutical clients in person injury and workers' compensation matters. In addition to defense, we work with clients to identify and mitigate risk so litigation can be avoided. Our attorneys advise clients on the design and implementation of return-to-work programs and the coordination of workers' compensation policies for multistate businesses.
- Our attorneys provide advice and counsel on employment cases within the pharmaceutical industry, as well as representation in state and federal courts as well as administrative agencies.
