Kurt Walsh devotes his practice to the defense of workers' compensation matters on behalf of insurance carriers and employers.

With almost 40 years of experience, Kurt Walsh consistently delivers favorable results to his clients, routinely reducing large claim value through the use of focused investigation methods. Kurt has extensive knowledge of the medical field, allowing him to uniquely focus on the investigation of medical and factual background pre- and post-injury. His clients consist of large national senior health facilities and rehabilitation centers. He also represents global food corporations.

Kurt has represented his clients before workers' compensation judges, the appellate court, the workers' compensation appeals board, and the Commonwealth Court.

With Kurt's vast experience, knowledge, and well-known reputation, he started the Weber Gallagher Scranton office in 1994. The office has since grown to include more practice areas to better serve our clients' needs.
